“Hearing Safety” Talk at HES

Parents are invited to join their children of grades 3 to 5 for a talk on hearing safety presented by Dr. Stephen A. Smith, otolaryngology-head and neck surgeon at the Massachusetts Eye and Ear Infirmary. Dr. Smith’s talk is especially timely: a recent John Hopkins study published in the Archives of Internal Medicine concluded that one in five Americans over the age of 12 has significant noise-induced hearing loss that interferes with their ability to communicate. Study researcher Dr. Frank Lin called the findings “shocking.” Fortunately, this loss is completely preventable, provided children develop safe hearing practices early. The “Hearing Safety” talk is for both children and parents. Please join us!
